The short version

- Mostly schools: primary and secondary schools take most of the money; universities are funded mainly through tuition fees paid with student loans, which are lending, not spending.
- Every English authority and every school: schools block funding per pupil for each authority over time, and each mainstream school's allocation on its authority's page.
- Devolved: each nation sets its own budgets and counts differently, so per-pupil figures are compared within a nation only.

Most education money goes on schools: £60.8bn on secondary and £43.4bn on pre-primary and primary in 2025-26, in cash. Universities appear small because in England most of their teaching income now comes from tuition fees paid with student loans, which are lending rather than spending.

United Kingdom

HM Treasury's spending on education by function: schools, further and higher education, and services such as school transport and meals. Student loans are lending, not spending, so the money lent is not in it. Since the Office for National Statistics changed how they are recorded (December 2018), the part not expected to be repaid counts as spending when the loan is made; the years before 2016-17 here come from editions of PESA published before that change.

What comes out: results by body

These are outputs and results published alongside the money. They are not what the money bought: demand, geography and recording practice differ between areas, and none of these figures shows cause and effect.

Each local authority: funding or spending per pupil on its own nation's measure (England: schools block; Wales: delegated schools budget; Scotland: cost per primary and secondary pupil). Compare within a nation only.

What each measure counts

Measure	What it counts
Schools block funding per pupil	The local authority's schools block of the dedicated schools grant, with the grants later rolled into it, divided by its schools block pupils (aged 5 to 16, in state-funded mainstream schools). Cash. Upper-tier authorities (counties, unitaries, metropolitan districts, London boroughs), England only. The latest year is the provisional allocation.
Schools budget per pupil (Wales)	The individual schools budget the council delegates to its schools, per pupil, as budgeted for the financial year (Welsh Government, delegated school budgets). Cash. It excludes spending the council keeps centrally. Welsh councils only; not comparable with the English schools block.
Cost per pupil (Scotland)	Gross revenue spending on primary and secondary schools divided by their pupils, from the Local Government Benchmarking Framework (its primary and secondary indicators combined here). Cash. Scottish councils only.

Further education and apprenticeships

Further education colleges and training providers are funded by DfE in England (16 to 19 funding and the adult skills fund, largely devolved to mayoral authorities) and by the devolved governments elsewhere. Apprenticeships in England are paid for from DfE's apprenticeship budget; large employers pay the apprenticeship levy.

Northern Ireland

Schools in Northern Ireland are funded by the Department of Education: most of the money goes to schools through the Common Funding Formula, and the Education Authority, one body for the whole of Northern Ireland, runs special education, transport, meals and other services. The department's resource budget at the start of 2025-26, as published; not outturn. Universities and colleges are funded separately by the Department for the Economy.

In 2025/26, 345,564 pupils were at school and 20,177 full-time equivalent teachers worked in grant-aided schools, 17.1 pupils per teacher.

What these figures do and don't show

- Different measures at each level. The UK and nation totals are HM Treasury's spending on education by function. Below them are each publisher's own measures: DfE's core schools budget, each authority's schools block, councils' net education spending. They are not expected to add up to the level above.
- England is not the UK. Education is devolved. The schools block, school allocations, the school workforce, apprenticeships and the student loan book shown here are England's, and are never added to UK or other nations' figures.
- Per pupil is not comparable across nations. England's schools block, Wales's figures and Scotland's council spending per pupil measure different things, so each authority is compared only with its own nation.
- Student loans are lending, not spending. The money lent, repaid and still owed is shown beside the spending, not added to it. Only the part not expected to be repaid counts as spending, on the basis the Office for National Statistics introduced in 2018.
- Nothing here shows cause and effect. Pupils per teacher, apprenticeship starts and other figures are shown alongside the money, not as its result. Areas differ in deprivation, sparsity, pupils with special needs and costs, which is why funding per pupil differs.
- Allocations are not spending. School-level figures are what each school was allocated for the year, not what it spent; the latest schools block year is provisional.

Crown Prosecution Service

Crown Prosecution Service: no file of spending over £25,000 found. No Crown Prosecution Service file of spending over £25,000 was found on GOV.UK; the CPS publishes its transparency data on its own website, which this site does not yet read.

Where it would be published: www.cps.gov.uk/publication-scheme. Checked 2026-09-24.

Where the money comes from

Almost all of it is voted by Parliament from general taxation. Courts also charge fees in civil, family and tribunal cases (not criminal ones), which pay for part of their running costs; prisons earn a little from work and services sold.

A conviction rate is not a measure of whether the right cases were brought: it depends on which cases the police refer and the CPS charges. Worked out from the counts of outcomes in the CPS's accounts.

England and Wales, separately

Spending on law courts and prisons in England and in Wales, £ million, cash (HM Treasury, country and regional analysis)

Year	England	Wales
2020-21	£10.5bn	£644m
2021-22	£11.2bn	£683m
2022-23	£11.9bn	£719m
2023-24	£13.2bn	£751m
2024-25	£14.1bn	£775m

One jurisdiction, but HM Treasury assigns its spending to each country. Justice in Wales is not devolved: the Welsh Government does not fund courts or prisons.

Hand-kept figures last checked against their sources on 24 September 2026.

What these figures do and don't show

- Different measures at each level. The UK and jurisdiction figures are HM Treasury's spending on law courts and prisons; the departments are their total managed expenditure; HMPPS, HMCTS and the CPS are net spending in their accounts; legal aid is on the accounts' RDEL measure; each prison is HMPPS's cost per place figure. They are not expected to add up.
- Three systems, never added. England and Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland run their own courts, prosecutors and prisons, and count their costs differently. Scottish and Northern Irish courts, prosecution and legal aid are not yet carried here.
- Prison costs compare unlike prisons. A young offender institution or a high-security prison costs far more per prisoner than an open prison. Compare a prison with others of its function, and treat public and contracted prisons' costs as different bases.
- Nothing here shows cause and effect. Backlogs, conviction rates and crowding sit beside the money, not as its result: they depend on crime, charging, sentencing law and much else.
- Hand-kept figures. HMPPS, HMCTS, CPS and the Scottish and Northern Irish prison services publish their accounts only as PDFs; their figures were read from them and are dated.

The short version

- Rail is most of it: most transport spending other than roads goes on the railways, including HS2.
- Every train operator has a page: its subsidy per journey and per kilometre, fares as a share of costs, punctuality and cancellations, against Great Britain.
- Buses by area: support per resident and per journey for every local transport authority in England.
- Price bases are never mixed: ORR's real terms, DfT's cash and the HS2 reports' own bases are each labelled.

Train operators: subsidy per journey, and results alongside

Every franchised operator in Great Britain, with its net government subsidy and what it comes to per passenger journey and per kilometre travelled, in 2025-26 prices. A negative figure means the operator paid the government a premium. Fares as a share of operating costs, trains on time and cancellations are shown beside the money, not as its result. What each measure counts

Measure	What it counts
Government subsidy per passenger journey	The operator's net government subsidy (negative where it paid the government a premium) divided by its passenger journeys, in 2025-26 prices. Subsidy is ORR's net franchise subsidy from 2015-16 and, before that, the government's payments to the franchise holder (ORR table 7273, without its estimated share of the network grant), so there is a break at 2015-16. Worked out here from ORR's figures.
Government subsidy per passenger kilometre	Net franchise subsidy divided by passenger kilometres travelled on the operator, in 2025-26 prices, from 2015-16. Long-distance operators carry passengers further, so this is the fairer comparison between them and commuter operators.
Fares as a share of operating costs	Fare income as a share of the operator's operating expenditure (staff, rolling stock, track access and other costs), from its management accounts (ORR table 7226).
Trains on time	Share of recorded station stops where the train arrived early or less than a minute late, over the financial year (ORR table 3133).
Cancellations	The cancellations score (a full cancellation counts one, a part cancellation a half) as a share of trains planned, over the financial year (ORR table 3123).

From franchises to public ownership

Until 2020 most passenger services were run under franchises: private companies took the fares and either received a subsidy or paid the government a premium. From March 2020 emergency agreements moved the revenue risk to the government, and operators have since moved into public ownership, ahead of Great British Railways. These changes are marked as breaks on every operator's series.

Support here is each authority’s net public transport support (mostly paying for routes that would not run commercially); it leaves out concessionary fares and the Bus Service Operators Grant, which DfT does not publish at this level. Authorities are the county, unitary or combined authority, or Transport for London. DfT warns that figures at this level can swing with recording practice. Journeys per resident are DfT’s own figures.

HS2: spend to date and the cost estimates

The Department for Transport reports to Parliament on HS2 every six months. The reports have used different price bases over time (2019 prices until December 2024, cash since July 2025), so each figure below is shown in its own base and none are added together. Phase 2 north of Birmingham was cancelled in October 2023; the latest estimates cover London Euston to Birmingham and the connection to the West Coast Main Line at Handsacre.

Active travel: walking, wheeling and cycling

For 2026-27 to 2029-30 the Department for Transport has allocated £121m a year of capital funding and £38m a year of revenue funding for active travel to 79 local transport authorities in England outside London: £600m over the four years. These are allocations, not spending. London is funded through Transport for London, and Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland fund active travel themselves.

The Department for Transport’s budget, outturn and plans

The Department for Transport’s budget covers roads as well as rail, buses and the rest, mostly in England, so it is shown here for context and not added to the totals above.

Scotland	£335	£80	£122
Wales	£281	£29	£17
Northern Ireland	£144	£87	£32

HM Treasury’s country and regional analysis: spending that can be identified as benefiting each nation, divided by its own population. Transport is devolved: Transport Scotland, the Welsh Government (through Transport for Wales) and Northern Ireland’s Department for Infrastructure (through Translink) run their own rail and bus policy. Spending for the UK as a whole is not assigned to a nation, so the nations do not add up to the UK.

What these figures do and don't show

- Roads are on their own page. The totals here are railways, local public transport and other transport; roads are left out, so the two pages can be added without counting anything twice.
- Three measures of rail money. HM Treasury's railway spending (the long-run chart), ORR's government support to the rail industry, and each operator's net subsidy count different things and do not match. Each chart says which it is.
- Price bases are stated on every figure. ORR publishes in real terms; it is converted back to cash here with the same GDP deflator. DfT bus figures are cash. HS2 costs are in the price base each report used (2019 prices, cash, or a mixed base) and are never added together.
- Breaks in the series are marked. Network Rail joined central government's books in 2015-16; operator subsidy changes source that year; from March 2020 emergency agreements put revenue risk on the government; and operators have moved into public ownership since 2018.
- Nothing here shows cause and effect. Subsidy, punctuality, cancellations and journeys are shown side by side. An operator carrying more passengers further, or running on a busier network, faces different costs.
- Where a level is not published, it says so. Government payments to an operator are one net figure; Network Rail and HS2 publish their spending by activity only in reports; bus support by council is published for England only.
- England-only and UK-wide figures are kept apart. Bus support by type and by local transport authority is England only; ORR's rail figures are Great Britain; Northern Ireland's railway is shown separately.

Roads and roadworks: spending, condition, potholes and who digs them up

Public services · Last updated 27 September 2026 · <https://whereyourmoneygoes.co.uk/roads/>

£14.2bn was spent on national and local roads in the UK in 2025-26, £205 per resident. That is +1.1% on a year earlier after inflation (+4.6% in cash). In 2025-26 prices it has gone from £13.5bn in 2006-07 to £14.2bn. Councils in England and Wales put the one-off cost of clearing the local road repair backlog at £18.62 billion (ALARM 2025-26). Utilities accounted for 63.9% of the days of roadworks finished in England in August 2026. Neither fuel duty nor vehicle excise duty is earmarked for roads.

Key figures

The short version

- Motoring taxes are not road taxes: fuel duty and VED raised £33.6bn in 2025-26; road spending was £14.2bn. Neither tax has been earmarked since 1937.
- Most local road money is capital grant from government; council revenue budgets pay for patching, gritting and lights.
- Condition, ratings and roadworks are England only; every highway authority has its own page.

What drivers pay, and what is spent on roads

In 2025-26 fuel duty raised £24.6bn and vehicle excise duty £9.0bn: £33.6bn together. Spending on national and local roads across the UK was £14.2bn, equal to 42% of those two taxes (29% in 2006-07).

Neither tax is earmarked for roads, and has not been since the 1930s. The Road Fund set up by the Roads Act 1920 had become notorious for being raided for other purposes, and in the House of Lords Library’s words, “Hypothecation was formally ended by provisions in the Finance Act 1936, which ensured that by 1 April 1937 the revenues from motor vehicle taxes were paid directly into the consolidated fund”. From 2020 to 2025 the government set strategic road funding in England at a sum equal to vehicle excise duty receipts (the National Roads Fund). That was a spending decision, not an earmark: the duty itself still went into the Consolidated Fund. "Road tax" has not existed since; see vehicle excise duty and fuel duty.

National Highways: funding by road period, and what was delivered

England’s motorways and major A roads are run by National Highways (Highways England until 2021), funded through five-year road investment strategies. The Office of Rail and Road checks each period’s delivery. Scotland’s and Wales’s trunk roads are run by their governments and are not funded this way.

Local roads: where the maintenance money goes

Councils pay for road maintenance from two pots: capital grant from government (in England, DfT's highways maintenance allocations), which pays for most resurfacing, and their own revenue budgets, which pay for routine repairs, gritting and street lighting. DfT's split below covers both for England; each council's page shows its revenue spending per mile of road it looks after.

Local roads: Department for Infrastructure	£414m	£428m	£215	+9.0%	HM Treasury	Local body not published: Northern Ireland's councils are not highway authorities: DfI Roads looks after local roads too, and publishes no spending by council area.
Trunk roads: Department for Infrastructure	£17m	£18m	£8.82	-14.2%	HM Treasury	Local body not published: In Northern Ireland the Department for Infrastructure (DfI Roads) looks after every public road, trunk and local. Its spending by road is not published as data.

Cash is as published. Real terms are in 2025-26 prices, using HM Treasury's GDP deflator. Per resident divides by ONS mid-year population for the area the body serves. Changes compare the same body in consecutive years.

What each measure counts

Measure	What it counts
Road maintenance spending per mile	The highway authority's net revenue spending on road maintenance (structural and routine) divided by the miles of road it looks after (locally managed A roads and all minor roads, DfT RDL0102, latest year). Net revenue spending from the council's own return (MHCLG revenue outturn in England, StatsWales in Wales, Scottish Local Government Finance Statistics in Scotland). It leaves out capital spending, which pays for most resurfacing and is funded mainly by government grant, and it is after income such as recharges; the nations' returns differ in what is netted off, so compare councils within a nation.
A roads where maintenance should be considered	Share of the council's A roads and motorways in the red category, where maintenance should be considered, from machine surveys (DfT RDC0120). England only. Survey methods changed from 2024-25 as councils moved to a new measure, so recent years are not fully comparable with earlier ones.
DfT maintenance grant per mile	The DfT highways maintenance allocation divided by the miles of road the authority looks after. England only, outside mayoral combined authority areas.
Roadworks on site per 100 miles of road	Works on site in the month per 100 miles of road the authority looks after. England only (Street Manager, DfT RDL0102).

The backlog: what councils say it would cost to catch up

The Asphalt Industry Alliance's annual survey of highway authorities in England and Wales (ALARM 2026) puts the one-off cost of bringing local roads up to a reasonable steady state at £18.62 billion in 2025-26, or £91,100 a mile. Councils estimate clearing it would take 12 years (12 in England outside London, 8 in London, 15 in Wales) if the money were there. Their annual carriageway budgets fell £1.37 billion short of what they said they needed.

Local highway authorities in England (including London) and Wales; 79% responded; results extrapolated to 115 English authorities without a PFI, 32 in London and 22 in Wales.

One-time catch-up cost reported in the ALARM survey, England and Wales

Survey	Catch-up cost
ALARM 2017	£12.06bn
ALARM 2025	£16.81bn
ALARM 2026	£18.62bn

These are local authorities’ own estimates, collected by an industry body; the government does not publish a backlog figure. DfT last estimated it in 2019, at £7.6 billion to £11.7 billion (National Audit Office).

Prevention or patching: the evidence on value for money

Preservation treatments such as surface dressing seal a road before water gets in and potholes form; resurfacing and strengthening replace it once it has failed; reactive patching fills holes as they appear. In the ALARM survey, a pothole filled as part of a planned programme cost £63.11 on average in 2025-26, against £93.79 as a reactive repair, and councils spent 25% of their carriageway budgets on reactive work (they said 18% would be appropriate).

- “The increasing backlog in road maintenance work hinders local authorities in undertaking preventative work that could deliver better value.” National Audit Office, The condition and maintenance of local roads in England \(HC 117\), Summary, paragraph 13 (24 July 2024).
- “DfT and other industry stakeholders, such as the UK Roads Leadership Group, have repeatedly identified that longer-term, preventative approaches deliver better value for money and are more cost effective than reactive, short-term maintenance activities.” National Audit Office, The condition and maintenance of local roads in England \(HC 117\), Paragraph 2.15 (24 July 2024).
- “between 2017 and 2023 the proportion of roads receiving maintenance treatment declined from 7.6% to 5.2% for A roads and 4.3% to 2.4% for B and C roads” National Audit Office, The condition and maintenance of local roads in England \(HC 117\), Summary, paragraph 13 (24 July 2024).

Potholes and compensation

“There is no agreed definition of a pothole, and no nationwide data on potholes held by government.” (National Audit Office, 24 July 2024). What exists instead: councils in England and Wales told the ALARM survey they filled 1,903,498 potholes in 2025-26, at about £149.3 million, and paid £15.9 million in compensation claims, with another £15.1 million in staff time handling them. Councils answering the RAC’s Freedom of Information requests received 53,015 claims in 2024 and paid 13,832 of them.

Since 2025 English highway authorities have had to publish a highways maintenance transparency report, setting out their maintenance work, to receive all of their DfT funding; each council’s page links to its report. DfT rates each authority red, amber or green on condition, spending and best practice: for 2025-26, 125 amber, 13 red, 16 green (DfT ratings).

Roadworks: who digs, for how long, and how often they overrun

In August 2026 163,028 works started on English roads. Utilities and other statutory undertakers promoted 66.7% of them and accounted for 63.9% of the days on site of works that finished that month; the rest were mostly the highway authorities’ own works. 2.2% of works finished on a later day than their permit allowed. Street Manager covers England only; each council’s page has its own figures.

Charges on works promoters, and what is published about them

Charge	What it is	What it raises
Section 74 overrun charges	A highway authority can charge a utility for every day its works run past the agreed duration, up to £10,000 a day depending on the road. From January 2026 the charges also apply at weekends and on bank holidays.	No national total of overrun charges is published. Individual councils publish theirs in answers to Freedom of Information requests. Source.
Lane rental	A lane rental scheme, approved by the Secretary of State, lets a highway authority charge for each day works occupy its busiest roads at the busiest times. From January 2026 authorities must spend at least half of any lane rental surplus on road maintenance.	What each scheme raises is in its own annual report; no national total is published. Source.
Permit schemes	Highway authorities in England can run a permit scheme: works promoters apply for a permit and may be charged a fee, and fee income must not exceed the scheme's allowable costs over three years. An authority is not required to charge a fee for its own works.	Permit fee income is reported in each scheme's annual evaluation report; no national total is published. Source.

What the auditors found

- National Audit Office, The condition and maintenance of local roads in England \(HC 117\) (24 July 2024, Summary, paragraph 13): “The increasing backlog in road maintenance work hinders local authorities in undertaking preventative work that could deliver better value.”
- National Audit Office, The condition and maintenance of local roads in England \(HC 117\) (24 July 2024, Paragraph 2.15): “DfT and other industry stakeholders, such as the UK Roads Leadership Group, have repeatedly identified that longer-term, preventative approaches deliver better value for money and are more cost effective than reactive, short-term maintenance activities.”
- National Audit Office, The condition and maintenance of local roads in England \(HC 117\) (24 July 2024, Conclusion on value for money, paragraph 18): “at present DfT does not have a good enough understanding of the condition of local roads, and does not use the limited data it does have to allocate its funding as effectively as possible.”
- National Audit Office, The condition and maintenance of local roads in England \(HC 117\) (24 July 2024, Figure 6, note 4): “There is no agreed definition of a pothole, and no nationwide data on potholes held by government.”

- National Audit Office, The condition and maintenance of local roads in England \(HC 117\) (24 July 2024, Summary, paragraph 13): “between 2017 and 2023 the proportion of roads receiving maintenance treatment declined from 7.6% to 5.2% for A roads and 4.3% to 2.4% for B and C roads”
- Office of Rail and Road, Annual Assessment of National Highways' performance: End of the second road period April 2020 to March 2025 \(HC 1588\) (15 January 2026, Paragraph 3.2): “National Highways has not achieved everything that it originally planned in RP2 for reasons both within and outside its control. It ultimately missed 11 of its enhancements commitments for reasons within its control.”

What these figures do and don't show

- Neither fuel duty nor vehicle excise duty is earmarked for roads. Both go into the Consolidated Fund with almost every other tax. Motoring taxes and road spending are shown side by side, not as what one paid for.
- Council figures are revenue spending only. Most resurfacing is capital spending, paid for mainly by the Department for Transport's grant, which is shown separately as an allocation. Net figures are after income, and each nation's return nets off different things, so compare councils within a nation.
- Condition, treatment, ratings and roadworks are England only. Scotland and Wales publish road condition through their own council performance frameworks, not read here; Street Manager covers England.
- Condition is shown beside money, not as its result. Weather, traffic, the age of the network and survey methods all move the figures, and councils began moving to a new survey standard in 2024-25.
- Pothole numbers and compensation are not collected by government. The figures here come from an industry survey (ALARM) and from Freedom of Information compilations, each named; councils outside a compilation have no figure.
- Roadworks counts are what Street Manager records. “On site in the month” counts works that started, finished or were updated in the latest full month published, not works on the road today, and misses long works with no update.

Figures from data/services/roads.json, generated 27 September 2026.

Common questions

- Does road tax pay for roads? No. Vehicle excise duty, often called road tax, has not been earmarked for roads since 1 April 1937, when motor taxes began to be paid into the Consolidated Fund. Fuel duty is not earmarked either. Road spending is decided each year like any other spending.
- Who is responsible for fixing a pothole? The highway authority for the road: National Highways for England's motorways and major A roads, and for other roads the county council, unitary council, metropolitan district or London borough (Transport for London for its red routes). In Scotland and Wales it is the council or the government for trunk roads; in Northern Ireland, the Department for Infrastructure.
